a manual for field workers and anyone interested in cross linguistic generalizations this textbook provides a critical introduction to major research topics and current approaches in linguistic typology the study of structural variation in human language and of the limits on that variation jae jung song draws on a wide range of cross linguistic data to describe what linguistic typology has revealed both about language in general and about the rich variety of ways in which meaning and expression are achieved in the world s languages following an introduction to the subject matter and its history the first part of the book explores theoretical issues and approaches as well as practical considerations such as sampling methods and data collection in the second part chapters examine variation in particular phenomena such as word order case alignment and evidentiality marking each chapter concludes with study questions and suggestions for further reading the volume will be suitable for undergraduate and graduate students in the fields of linguistic typology and language universals and as secondary reading for cross linguistically focused courses in phonology morphology syntax and semantics

what do all languages have in common and what gives each language its individuality language typology which has developed in response to these fundamental questions is concerned with the construction of theoretical frameworks capable of delimiting the range of possible human languages and of capturing constraints on cross linguistic variation language typology is a major concern of all contemporary schools of linguistics yet a coherent image of the field is difficult to form because of the diversity of theoretical orientations and practical methodologies this collection brings together for the first time original contributions from major schools of typological research from the prague school to the generative grammar tradition leading scholars offer first hand accounts of the theoretical foundations and substantive findings of their particular school of thought clarifying basic assumptions which are often not explicitly stated in the literature the collection as a whole provices both a survey of the place of individual typological schools in the historiography of the subject and a comprehensive account of the present state of language typology in an international context it gives an overview of both the underlying unity of and the differences in the methods employed in the field

this textbook provides an introduction to language typology which assumes minimal prior knowledge of linguistics this clear and accessible introduction to linguistic typology covers all linguistic domains from phonology and morphology over parts of speech the np and the vp to simple and complex clauses pragmatics and language change there is also a discussion on methodological issues in typology this textbook is the first introduction that consistently applies the findings of the world atlas of language structures systematically includes pidgin and creole languages and devotes a section to sign languages in each chapter all chapters contain numerous illustrative examples and specific feature maps keywords and exercises help review the main topics of each chapter appendices provide macro data for all the languages cited in the book as well as a list of web sites of typological interest an extensive glossary gives at a glance definitions of the terms used in the book this introduction is designed for students of courses with a focus on language diversity and typology as well as typologically oriented courses in morphology and syntax the book will also serve as a guide for field linguists

this book is intended as a systemic functional contribution to language typology both for those who would like to understand and describe particular languages against the background of generalizations about a wide range of languages and also for those who would like to develop typological accounts that are based on and embody descriptions of the systems of particular languages rather than isolated constructions the book is a unique contribution in at least two respects on the one hand it is the first book based on systemic functional theory that is specifically concerned with language typology on the other hand the book combines the particular with the general in the description of languages it presents comparable sketches of particular languages while at the same time identifying generalizations based on the languages described here as well as on other languages the volume explores eight languages covering seven language families french german pitjantjatjara tagalog telugu vietnamese chinese and japanese

this unique three volume 2007 survey brings together a team of leading scholars to explore the syntactic and morphological structures of the world s languages clearly organized and broad ranging it covers topics such as parts of speech passives complementation relative clauses adverbial clauses inflectional morphology tense aspect mood and diexis the contributors look at the major ways that these notions are realized and provide informative sketches of them at work in a range of languages each volume is accessibly written and clearly explains each new concept introduced although the volumes can be read independently together since creole languages draw their properties from both their substrate and superstrate sources the typological classification of creoles has long been a major issue for creolists typologists and linguists in general several contradictory proposals have been put forward in the literature for example creole languages typologically pair with their superstrate languages chaudenson 2003 with their substrate languages lefebvre 1998 or even creole languages are alike bickerton 1984 such that they constitute a definable typological class mcwhorter 1998 this book contains 25 chapters bearing on detailed comparisons of some 30 creoles and their substrate languages as the substrate languages of these creoles are typologically different the detailed investigation of substrate features in the creoles leads to a particular answer to the question of how creoles should be classified typologically the bulk of the data show that creoles reproduce the typological features of their substrate languages this argues that creoles cannot be claimed to constitute a definable typological class the series is a platform for contributions of all kinds to this rapidly developing field general problems are studied from the perspective of individual languages language families language groups or language samples conclusions are the result of a deepened study of empirical data special emphasis is given to little known languages whose analysis may shed new light on long standing problems in general linguistics
